Tony nominee Keith Carradine will star in the New York premiere of Anthony Horowitz's Mindgame at the SoHo Playhouse, beginning October 28, with an opening date set for November 9. Ken Russell will direct.

The play, which played the West End in 2000, is a thriller set in a lunatic asylum. A writer of pulp crime novels visits the institution for an interview with a notorious serial killer. But when he arrives, he finds nothing can be trusted, not even his own eyes.

The cast will also include Lee Godart as Mark Styler, and scenic design is by Beowulf Boritt. Additional casting and design team will be announced at a later date.

Carradine, who will play Dr. Farquhar, received his Tony nomination for his 1991 performance in the title role of The Will Rogers Follies. His additional Broadway credits include Hair, Foxfire (for which he received an Outer Critics Circle Award), and Dirty Rotten Scoundrels. He won an Academy Award for his song "I'm Easy" from the film Nashville, in which he also performed. His numerous film and television credits include Deadwood, Spiderman, Dexter, Thieves Like Us, Trouble in Mind, and The Duellists.

Horowitz is best known as a screenwriter and novelist. He created the hugely popular and BAFTA-award winning TV series, Foyle's War and his books for children include the Alex Rider series about a teenage secret agent. Russell, who will be making his New York stage directorial debut, directed the films Tommy, Woman In Love, and The Boyfriend.
